

Published on 1 November 2007 by Thomas Caveng, Legal Translator / Marketing Director

t.caveng@soulier-avocats.com

Tel.: + 33 (0)4 72 82 20 80

Read this post online

Dioxin case in which associations of ecologists claimed that the Gilly-sur-Isère incinerator was responsible for causing cancers

In the dioxin case in which associations of ecologists claimed that the Gilly-sur-Isère incinerator was responsible for causing cancers because of dioxin fumes, Jean-Luc Soulier and Stéphanie Staeger represent the former president of the intercommunal syndicate which owns the incinerator who was charged with endangering other people's life. On October 26, 2007, the investigating judge dismissed the case.

Appeals have been lodged by plaintiffs against this dismissal order but the Investigating Chamber of the Chambery Court of Appeals reject the vast majority of such appeals. In addition, in a judgment dated November 22, 2007, the Court of Appeals of Lyon, ruling following referral from the Cour de Cassation (French supreme court) held that several plaintiffs who based their claim exclusively on the fact that they lived near the incinerator for a certain time were not entitled to join the procedure.

Soulier Avocats is an independent full-service law firm that offers key players in the economic, industrial and financial world comprehensive legal services.

We advise and defend our French and foreign clients on any and all legal and tax issues that may arise in connection with their day-to-day operations, specific transactions and strategic decisions.

Our clients, whatever their size, nationality and business sector, benefit from customized services that are tailored to their specific needs.

For more information, please visit us at www.soulier-avocats.com.

This material has been prepared for informational purposes only and is not intended to be, and should not be construed as, legal advice. The addressee is solely liable for any use of the information contained herein.